

TIME

SALMAN RUSHDIE PLAYS THE TRUMP CARD

The Indian-British-American novelist takes on global strife in his new book

By Sarah Begley

32

2 | From the Staff

4 | For the Record

The Brief

News from the U.S. and around the world

5 | Why Steve Bannon doesn't scare Republicans

8 | Ian Bremmer: Redoing Kenya's presidential election is good for Africa

9 | Remembering gay-rights activist Edith Windsor

10 | Behind the scenes of Angela Merkel's campaign

12 | The U.S. Open: Sloane Stephens' historic win; Rafael Nadal's 16th Grand Slam

The View

Ideas, opinion, innovations

17 | Equifax and the perils of passwords

19 | An observatory in Cyprus takes inspiration from a galaxy far, far away

19 | How hurricanes got human names

20 | Taking marriage to the mountaintop

21 | How O.J. and Bill Clinton made way for President Donald Trump

The Features

A Perfect Storm

Hurricane Irma, the strongest storm in the open Atlantic, was met by an equally strong response on land

By Jeffrey Kluger and Haley Sweetland Edwards 22

Crowdfunding relief

By Melissa Chan 30

The military home-front role

By James Stavridis 33

Vietnam War, Revisited

Karl Vick talks to directors Ken Burns and Lynn Novick about their new documentary—a searing historical narrative told by those who lived it. For Jon Meacham, it brought memories of his father's Vietnam service 34

Fall Preview

What to read

42 | How Trump inspired Salman Rushdie's latest novel

46 | Q&A with novelist Celeste Ng

48 | Six cookbooks to dig into

50 | Comb through a cornucopia of nonfiction

51 | Susanna Schrobdsdorff on Hillary Clinton's What Happened

52 | 8 Questions for George Osborne, Britain's former Finance Minister

The flooded Sunrise Motel in East Naples, Fla., after Hurricane Irma hit on Sept. 11

Photograph by Mark Wilson—Getty Images

ON THE COVER: Photograph by Thomas Prior for TIME