

OCTOBER 2017

CURRENT HISTORY

A Journal of Contemporary World Affairs

RUSSIA AND EURASIA

Uneasy Adaptations

Everyday Life in Ukraine's War Zone

Greta Uehling

The Orthodox Crusade

Kristina Stoeckl

Climate and Culture

Susan Crate

Revolutionary Legacies

Lenin's Empire of Nations

Ronald Grigor Suny

Moscow's Universal Mission

Jeremy Friedman

Plus:

How Russian Propaganda Succeeds

ies

$8.95US $9.95CAN

0 74470 75307 0

CURRENT HISTORY

October 2017

Vol. 116, No. 792

CONTENTS

- 251 The Empire that Dared Not Speak Its Name: Making Nations in the Soviet State Ronald Grigor Suny
Guided by Lenin, the Soviet Union early on embraced the principle of self-determination for its constituent peoples, even while retaining imperial characteristics—which proved to be a fatal contradiction.
- 258 The Revolutionary Roots of Russian Foreign Policy Jeremy Friedman
From the tsars to the revolution to the post-Soviet era, Russia has sought to offer the world an alternative to the Western model, yet it still wants to be considered a part of Europe.
- 264 Everyday Life in Ukraine's War Zone Greta Uehling
As violence has become part of the daily routine in war-torn eastern Ukraine, civilians are trapped inside the front lines. Many have adapted in surprising ways, but their trauma will long define the region.
- 271 The Russian Orthodox Church's Conservative Crusade Kristina Stoeckl
A resurgent Moscow Patriarchate is harnessing hostility to Western liberalism to pull Russia to the right in both domestic and foreign policy. But divisions are emerging among the believers.
- 277 Climate Change Adaptation and Traditional Cultures in Northern Russia Susan Crate
The melting permafrost undergirds the Russian north and its rich diversity of local ecosystems and cultures. Some indigenous groups are changing their livelihoods but reluctant to relocate. Second in a series on climate adaptation around the world.
- PERSPECTIVE
- 282 A Perfect Storm: American Media, Russian Propaganda Sarah Oates
The Russian state-sponsored campaign to spread disinformation abroad has found fertile ground in the United States, thanks to upheaval in the news media and politicians' denigration of the press.
- BOOKS
- 285 Broken Ties in the Ferghana Valley Marianne Kamp
An anthropologist with long ties to a border town in Central Asia watched as nationalist sentiment turned what had been an informal boundary into a hard divide between erstwhile neighbors.
- THE MONTH IN REVIEW
- 288 August 2017
An international chronology of events in August, country by country, day by day.