On the cover

A new kind of left-wing doctrine is emerging. It is not the answer to capitalism's problems: leader, page 9. Do the radical left's ideas make sense? Page 16. A Finnish trial of universal basic income, page 63

• Turmoil in Thailand The military junta's scheme to manipulate next month's election is back on track after a brief derailment, page 21

• Why the Chinese are so unhappy China has enjoyed unprecedented economic success. A new book examines why its people remain gloomy: Chaguan, page 27

• The beauty of big banks American banking's chunkiest merger since the financial crisis may herald further consolidation, page 57

• Special report: Islam in the West Though both sides remain wary, they are getting closer, after page 40. One of the great religions is experiencing a little-noticed transformation: leader, page 13. The caliphate is nearly dead. Its ideas are not, page 43
